Meet 4 Oneworld's newest Board members...Mimi
Nevala

Mimi is a retired foreign language teacher. She brings to the board a strong background in education and community involvement.

“Be the change you wish to see in the world’ is a quote that so aptly expresses what serving on this board offers me the chance to do: to be afforded the opportunity to go beyond conversation and shoulder shrugging. To instead offer children hope through attention, education, and persistence. It is through our own personal involvement and intention that we can make a change – to affect lives and the directions those lives take, and to perhaps change futures destined otherwise to be tragic. That is the change I want to see in the world. Children are the future and Africa needs her children and her future.”

John
Cassidy

John is a former educator and program facilitator of the Global Young Leaders Conference in Washington D.C. He currently serves as the director of the National Youth Leadership Forum on Technology, a nonprofit leadership conference for students interested in careers in the technology field.

“Communities throughout Africa need our help to end the cycle of poverty and war. This is a human struggle to guarantee that every child has a home, a nutritious meal, and an education. If we can educate one person about the despair of poverty, empower one person to fight against injustice, or inspire one person to carry the message of hope forward, then the cycle will begin to be reversed.”

Andrew Bruex

Andrew has a background in business as the founder of Industrial Logic Controls, a factory automation distributor, and as the owner of Universal Formulas, a nutritional supplement company. He also served on the board of The World Tree, a multicultural educational nonprofit organization.

“Education is a gift like no other. The energy and resources directed towards eliminating poverty through education provides the highest degree of return by truly empowering the individual. In addition, it feels purposeful and right. It brings forth smiles and a higher standard of living to all involved. It is life changing for those giving, as well as those receiving.”
